A New Booklet by Eamonn McCann

Bloody Sunday March Committee Events 2014

Where: Central Library, Foyle Street

Launch: 1.30 pm, Thursday 30th January 2014

This Thursday at 1.30 pm in the Central Library, Foyle Street, The Bloody Sunday March Committee will launch a new booklet by Eamonn McCann on Bloody Sunday entitled 'Go on the Paras...' The launch is part of this year's anniversary events.

Eamonn McCann will be present to read from the booklet, take questions on its relevance and sign copies. The booklet costs £5.00

Kate Nash of the committee said, 'Understandably a lot of people think that the Bloody Sunday Inquiry got to the truth of the day. Sadly, given all the money and hope invested in it, it didn't do that. There was an apology of course. And then there are so many other injustices, that the news media moves on and people think, 'It must have got sorted'. We are so glad there are journalists like Eamonn who will always look below the surface of things and report back for the rest of us. This is a very important little publication. It reviews all the information provided to the Bloody Sunday Inquiry, but draws compelling and very different conclusions. We are delighted he was moved to write it.'

"Go On The Paras!" is what Major General Robert Ford was heard shouting to the soldiers of 1 Para as they entered the Bogside on foot through Barrier 14 on William Street on the 30th January 1972.
